ROCHESTER, N. Y.

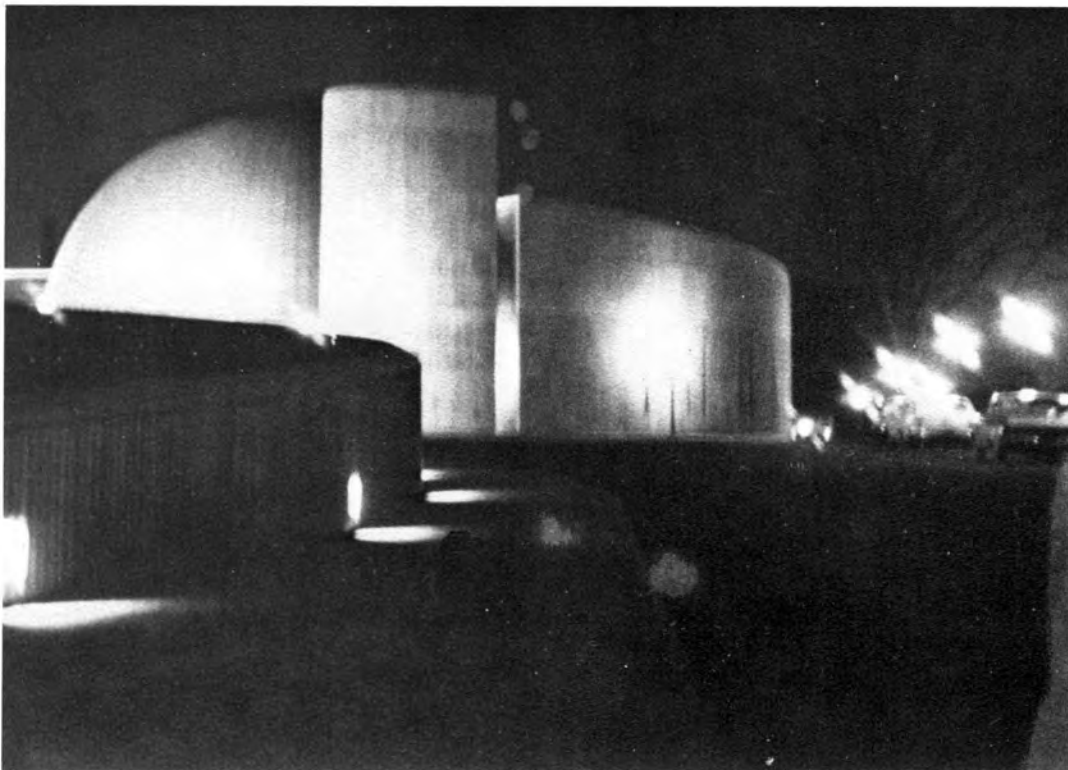

*The things we love are created in time, changed in time, destroyed in time.
Laughing moments become lasting memories, temporary pleasures evolve into never-ending joys, all in time.*

*We grow in time, and our minds open to new goals, new hopes, new dreams.
Our goals reach forever upward, our hopes grow forever bolder, our dreams forever defy fear.*

We dedicate this year book

to realities of the present,
to hopes of the future,

have helped us to shape our memories, realities, and hopes*

SENIOR CLASS HISTORY

Time—hours and days and weeks and months and years. You and I have spent four years of our time together here, four years that are now over.

Think back four years, or a little longer. Think back till you remember eighth grade and a Saturday morning entrance exam. We sat and stared at each other before the test, potential classmates all. Would I like that girl if I knew her? Think back to big sisters and ordering a red and grey plaid skirt. Think back to the butterflies in your stomach the night before school began four years ago.

Think back to Freshman year. The Seniors seemed so old then. "Will we be that sophisticated in three years?" Barbara had bangs and Christine was taller, but I still couldn't tell them apart, not then. Primes were on Mondays and we always forgot our white gloves. Do you remember Mother Cherry's Doctrine Class? And English? I wonder if anyone ever did finish the Iliad. Not that it matters now, I guess. Think of that first dance in the gym, and our first conge, and our first Sacred Heart First Friday.

Think back to Sophomore year, with newcomers Jean, Em, and Kathy, and Mother Schellings' English Class. That was the year the "Eggplant ate Chicago" and we switched to green skirts. "Happy Anniversary", and would you like to buy a pen? We did geometry proofs for Mrs. Piedici to the tune of "Sunny," and Gail was on the receiving end of our first surprise birthday party. Patty Roach got her license, we went to the Synagogue for Doctrine, and put on a play with real live boys.

Think back to Junior year, and Martha and Marilyn and Sister Brenda. We had a new M.G., Sister Whalen, and a new Coordinator of Studies, Sister McCarthy. We organized a student council and ordered rings. Mother McCaffrey gave each of us a poem on her birthday. Do you remember The Scarlet Letter and War and Peace? And ("Courage, Lord!") Math 11? There were, of course, college boards. "How many did you leave out?" We had a Junior Prom and won a hockey tournament. The school was closing but you and I would graduate, after 'the best year ever'. "My girl rose," Linda flunked road tests, and we all cried at "Gone With The Wind." Think about typing a 15 page paper on Emily Dickinson and singing "Scarborough Fair." How many times did you see "The Graduate" anyway? Think of Ann in Grover's Corners and of writing songs for the Seniors, and of receiving our rings.

Think back over Senior year. We painted the lounge and each other. Think of Patty Meath leading forums, and of Mother Whalen's space capsule. Suddenly Seniors seemed so young. We'd expected to feel different somehow, but all I felt was nervous and you seemed to share my silly fears. College catalogues, applications and interviews, and all for what? Barbara Hathaway was the first to be accepted. There is a purpose behind it all. "This," as Nancy would say, "is true." Think of Bonnie and her Dukes' buttons and Michele's surprise birthday party that actually was a surprise. Maria Todd sang in three languages and Maria Martinez became a citizen. Think of Liz on the ski slopes and Lynn with her candy sales, and Anita with a Red Cross Chest and social action rides. And then, think of graduation.

Our times here are finished. We have worked and studied and played together here four years. Now we are leaving and something in us cries out to stay. But think ahead, for if there is one thing you and I have learned here, it is that each year's ending means another year's beginning.

*Home is where one starts from. As we grow older
 The world becomes stranger, the pattern more complicated
 Of dead and living. Not the intense moment
 Isolated, with no before and after,
 But a lifetime burning in every moment
 And not the lifetime of one man only
 But of old stones that cannot be deciphered.
 There is a time for the evening under starlight,
 A time for the evening under lamplight
 (The evening with the photograph album).
 Love is most nearly itself
 When here and now cease to matter.
 Old men ought to be explorers
 Here and there does not matter
 We must be still and still moving
 Into another intensity
 For a further union, a deeper communion
 Through the dark cold and the empty desolation,
 The wave cry, the wind cry, the vast waters
 Of the petrel and the porpoise. In my end is my beginning.*

T. S. Eliot, East Coker

Dear Class of '69 and all—

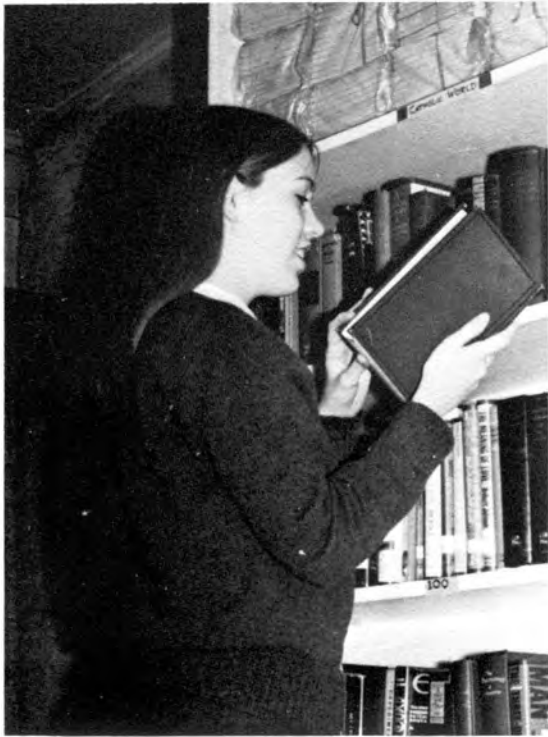

What I would like to say to you is already well expressed in T. S. Eliot's East Coker.

The Sacred Heart, not any house, is your true home. You can find His houses in many parts of the world, (and you will always be welcomed), but you can find Him in every circumstance of your lives, above all in those which call for the gift of service, of self, of love. May you be responsive to all the challenges of each ending, each beginning, and so your lives will be so many signal lights (La Balise!) marking the channels which will lead to "a deeper communion."

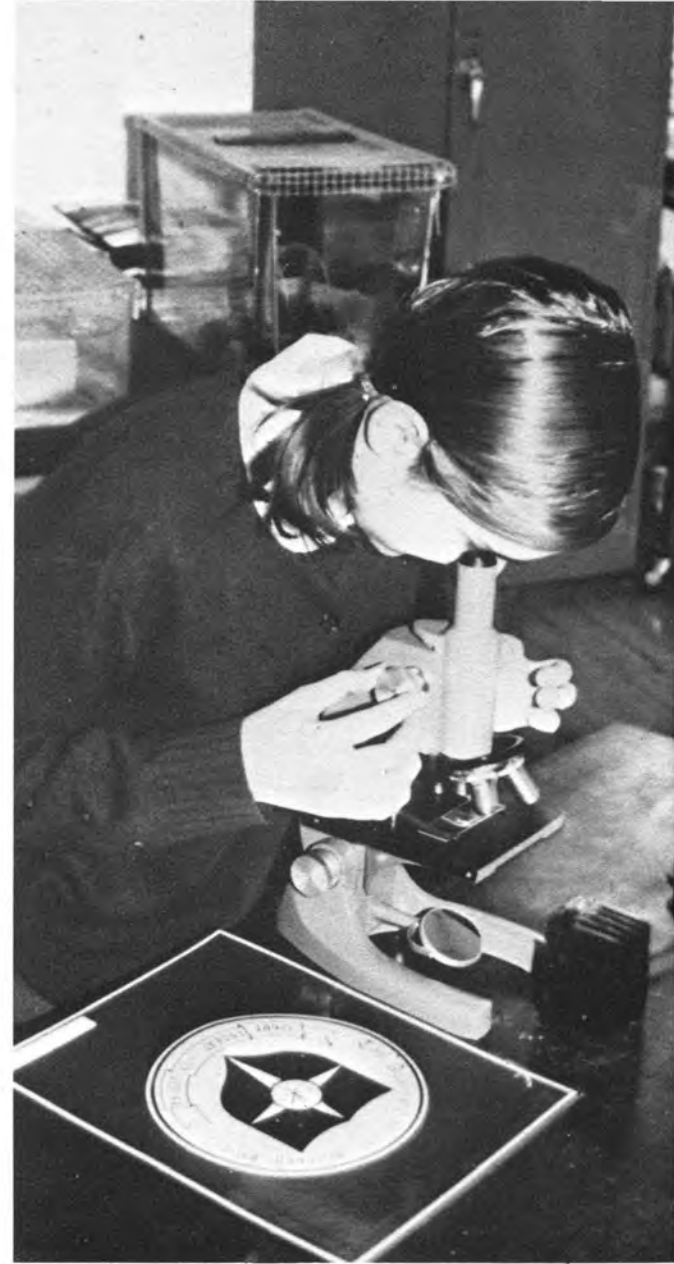

*Not fare well
 But fare forward, voyagers,*

*A. M. Donnell

CLASS OF 1969 VALEDICTORY

Our life at Prince Street is complete; a space in time has passed. But it is by no means an empty space, for it is filled with memories and hope. And it is by no means ended, for each of us keeps it alive within her as a very important chapter of her life. For this has been a time of guided change—growth into women, progression into individuals.

From pinafores and primes, curtsies and white gloves, to a new learning adventure, we have discovered a feeling of independence that we have never experienced before. We have come to relate to you both as our teachers, sharing with us your knowledge, and as our friends, sharing with us a powerful feeling of trust and of understanding. As we have come to realize how much of ourselves we will soon leave behind.

Yet, each one of us leaves with a part of this school. We leave with a vibrant awareness of life, involved in its beauty and encouraged by its possibilities. We leave with a "Sacred Heart Spirit" of pride and family unity, as traditional as the ideals upon which this school was founded. We leave with a deep appreciation of all that you have given—values that will be preserved and treasured for all the years to come.

We are as much a part of this past as we will be of the future. In this way, we will take our past into the future. And with these memories as a foundation, with your example as a guide, with these ideals as a goal, this can only be our beginning.
