FOREWORD

In our travels, there are a few scenes which make a lasting impression on our minds; these we treasure. Then, too, there are incidents which bring forth a smile and an "I remember." Thus, upon completion of his journey through Washington High School, John Q. Senior carries with him memories and experiences of his classmates and friends. In the confusion of Mr. Senior's departure his bag falls open, scattering its contents. The staff of the Surveyor speeds to the assistance of the remarkable John Q. and helps to reassemble the memories of "Mr. Senior Goes Through Washington."

DEDICATION

When traveling through unknown territory, a guide is often very much in need. Once found, his helpfulness is not forgotten though the need for it may never rise again. From the very beginning of the trip through Washington, when finding the correct room was the major problem, to the end of his course, John Q. Senior has never lacked dependable guides. Whether in or out of trouble, he has always been able to rely upon the aid and advice of the faculty to help him solve his problems.

For this reason, we, the Class of 1940, dedicate this, our senior annual, to the Faculty of Washington High School with the expressed desire that our appreciation and love will preclude other, less tender, memories of our escapades.

A POCKET FULL OF MEMORIES, WE NOW PRESENT THE MULTIFARIOUS
MR. SENIOR OF WASHINGTON. PERUSING THE NEXT FEW PAGES, LET'S OBSERVE THE PERSONAL ACHIEVEMENTS OF EACH COMPONENT
JOHN Q.

JANUARY CLASS LEADERS...

Through all his trials and tribulations, John Q. Senior has had excellent guidance and understanding from the class advisers of January 1940, Mrs. Augusta Robinson and Mr. William Rotmans. For our class functions, John Q. has found their experience and encouragement a foundation on which to build his efforts. We can conceive of no better way and no better place to thank them than in this book, a product of the cooperative handiwork of the advisers and the senior class.

Although small in numbers, the January section nevertheless is a fine example of splendid co-operation of officers, advisers, and members.

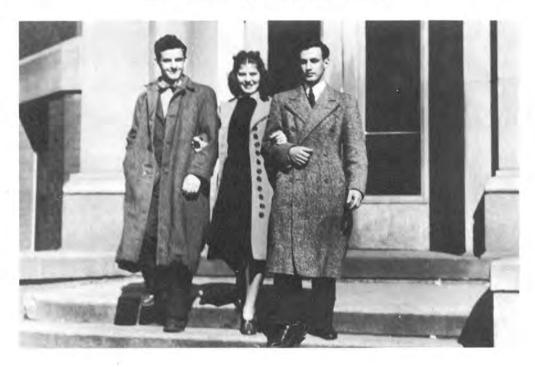

John Q. is expecially proud of the January class officers and their excellent leadership in all class projects.

ADVISERS

OFFICERS

JUNE CLASS LEADERS...

"Progress and development can always be traced to efficient and capable leaders." This is one of the reflections made by Mr. Senior.

During the four year period that Mrs. Mildred Judson and Mr. Everett Kennell have been the advisers to the Class of June 1940, they have always had time to work and plan for the class. The success of our various dances and all the senior functions of the June section may be credited to them

Similarly our senior class officers, have done a lion's share of work in both planning and action. When we casually receive our diplomas at graduation, we should remember that all the groundwork for that smooth running performance has been carefully directed by our leaders.

In Memorian STEPHEN TURULA Class of June 1940

We all liked Tay. He was an all-around boy. At basketball and Latin he was tops. In character, there was none equal to him. Careless, lovable, intellectual, and witty, he was capable of removing the gloomiest frown. Whenever he was about, we forgot petty differences and lost ourselves in the cheerfulness of his mood.

But that isn't why we revered Tay, loved him, and cherished his friendship. He was our favorite because of his splendid character, his honesty, tact, and ever present sense of humor, his power to spread good feeling and good will among those with whom he came into contact. We loved him because he was Tay and no one else—because he was everything an American youth should be.

We'll never forget him-our Tay.

TIME MARCHES ON, AND SO DOES MR. SENIOR. DELVING INTO HITH-ERTO UNFREQUENTED PLACES, WE FIND JOHN Q. OF THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE AS ACTIVE AND AS MISCHIEVOUS A PERSON AS ANY OF HIS PREDECESSORS. LET'S TAKE A LOOK...

MR. SENIOR GOES THROUGH THE FILES

Mr. Senior's bag has grown bulky! He is about to empty it into the files in the main office; let's listen to him.

"Such a melee of cards! What data they reveal! Some should be kept. Ah, here's a place to file them along with the other 6,174.2 graduates.

Hm mm-this small packet must be the class of January, 1940. Kinda' small—but I'll bet they did big things and had big people.

Take athletics for instance, there's Mike Cirrincione and Tony Callipare who combined their efforts to make our soccer team what it is; and Steve Powell, who was one of the few three-letter men participating in basketball, soccer, and baseball.

One can't forget the cheerleaders; especially such ones as Dom DeGeorge, class president and Nicky Sedita, president of the Varsity Club.

Notice too this group of intelligentsia and artists! Just look at Olga Golben, artist, associate editor of the "Surveyor," and winner of the D. A. R. All American Girl Contest. Or take Syl Abramowitz, who won the Bausch and Lomb Award or Harold Cohen, Lions' Club winner and lead in the class play. Or Harold Filer or Genevieve Sukis, star in Clarence. Look at Carl Ottobrino, concert master of the Inter-High Orchestra. And Eli Rizzo and Hilda Silver. Take Jack Brodie, boy, can he sketch! He only sketches still life objects because no one has nerve control enough to pose for him.

Yes, it's quite a class!! What's this? More records? Oh, yea this is that Class of June, 1940. Gee, they certainly had a tip-top combination.

Just look at these records.

Tell me, when has any class ever had such a galaxy of athletes as Irene Smyke, who swims like a fish; Tony Andrea, school boxing champ; and Arnie Kowba; Tony DiMino; Mike Danylshyn; Dave Kaplan and . . . say, I could go on all night naming athletes from June, 1940. Scholars? Sure . . . they're as plentiful as athletes. There's Marv. Rubstein, our S. C. President, who edits this book and is standard bearer; Harriet Lipsky, who did such a good job as editor of the "Pathfinder" and who is class vice-president; Mikey Muto, who walked off with the French Award in his junior year and was S. C. president, Blanche Tillim, who edits the "Post" and is guardian of the Flag, and Seb Tomasselli, and Alan Goldstone and Melvin Fleisher and so many more that I'd have to have a supplement to this book in order to list them all.

And orators—Wow—do they pack a punch! Heading the contenders for class honors are Sam Yaroslow, who on the slightest provocation can give a complete report on the evils and benefits of the present theatrical setup for any length of time desired; whether it be five minutes or five hours, and Joe D'Amico, class president, who speaks out in the executive council and open forums.

Actors, thespians-Well while June '40 can't boast of any Maurice Evanses, Clark Gables, Helen Hayes or Bette Davises it has produced Jesse Bressloff, Lillie Levin, Jack Grossman, Fanesta Barlow, and Gertrude Esther Rolick, who combined their talents to make the class play "What a Life" one of Washington's greatest dramatic efforts.

Well-enough of this reminiscing. It's been a busy day, I'm tired; and so, to bed."

MR. SENIOR TAKES AT

"Gosh they're out of focus again-just when I had these binoculars set on that thingamajig flying around up there. Hey!! You're gonna hit me! Hey-y-y!

"Let me present myself; I'm Doctor Philippopolis, Ph.D., N. R. A., and F. D. R. This is Topsy, my time machine. May I help

"Hello—Hi, Topsy. Bit late to focus the binoculars but you can help me brush off these pieces. Say, could I see what Old Man Time'll do to the class of '40?'

"Eh, well, hop in. My dear boy, don't take me so literally. Here we are, 1945!"

"W. P. A.—Oh, come on, give 'em a chancel 2,100 A. D.! From frying pan to fire! Please, I don't like seeing my name in print... on a tombstone.

"Well, I'll try again. Whoa, Topsy! At last, 1955!

'Doc, look! There's Vic D'Orazio and Dominic DeGeorge battling for first place in the hair dresser's league. What do you know-free waves!

"Wow, a glass topped studio with Olga Golben inside! I remember she painted me once. I had to scrub for an hour to get it off.

"Look, Shirl Berliner's a fashion model, posing for illustrator, Jack Brodie. How does he do it . . . with fashions changing so fast?

'Harold Filer is news commentator on S. L. A. M.; let's listen in . . ., Harold Cohen, of Apex Dairies, prescribing milk ink for homework problem ... Minnie Bolkosky is in a new hit "Yes Sir, No Sir" ... Carl Ottobrino is at the Met. . . . Donald Maddy is opening his new pharmacy. . . .

'Say, Doc, can we set Topsy ahead a half year or so?" Hold tight!"

"Can you beat it? Alan Cohen is American minister to China-what there's left of it. And isn't that Communist leader, Melvin Fleisher, returning from Europe?

Gee whiz! Honey Chile Macknik and Shirley Germanow are private secretaries in the Georgia Chamber of Commerce. What a break for Georgia!

Bouncing babies aren't new to Cosimo Cullato—he's chem engineer at Goodyear. And poor Alan Goldstone—risking his life as prof of chemistry at his alma mater!

There re certainly making something out of nothing these days. Manuel Schreiber is Chemurgist at Rockefeller Institute where onions become L'eau de Fragrance.

That new plant for making plaknites that inventor Mary Rubenstein designed is a puzzle to me. Bet he couldn't take it apart and put it together again.

Look, there's the Metropolitan. People are arriving in their planes. Yes, sir, there's Mary Badura, stage actress, and millionaire philanthropist, John Fideor, of the X. Y. Z. Meat Co. And Bettie Kolko with her allgirl orchestra; and Orlando Francione, author of "Modern Dance." Whata crowd! and whata program-Miriam Lestin, pianist, and soprano Regina Maliborski.

"Sol Ahitow is advertising manager of a New York magazine; gosh—Shirley Appelbaum writes the fashion notes.

"Arnie Kowba and Jack Grossman's last newsreel is at Sam Yaroslow's theatre. Look at that shot of Irene Smyke, national diving champ and say, Lill Rosen is doing all right in Atlantic City—wish I were a judge.

"Aw, come on, doc, what are you turning back for, I haven't seen half the old timers yet.

Sorry, my dear boy, your presence handicaps me. It'll be your turn in 1955!'

MR. SENIOR LIVES THE LIFE OF RILEY

It would seem from the foregoing pages that John Q. Senior's life at Washington has been "just a bowl of cherries." Ah, how you err there, dear reader. There has been much bitter with the sweet, and just to show you your mistake, let us go through Mr. Senior's last year at Washington.

So as to understand fully the torture process from the very beginning, we shall start our sad story at the end of John Q.'s junior year. There we find him filling out mile after mile of schedule with a kind of grim abandon and a lot of ink going to "waist" (for most seniors are rather slovenly individuals). Picture it every one, or look at Picture I where we see our poor victim. Don't let the smile fool you either; that is one of those sweet, sickly smiles that people are known to have just before going mad.

The scene changes, and, thoroughly refreshed after a very rapid ten weeks' vacation during which Mr. Senior perspired freely, we pick him up again in Scene II. John Q. has just become a senior, and is he proud? If the poor fish only knew what was coming, he would not strut so.

Torture Chamber III takes place about ten days later. John Q. is just beginning to feel the effects of five hours of school, five hours of homework and five hours of sleep for five days every week. Note the crazed look, that unbalanced, horrible leer. Alas! Poor Senior, I knew him well in the carefree days of yore.

Rapidly (Oh, yeah!) the year drags on and the long awaited Senior Play arrives. This event cost most Washingtonians a mere 25c, but to the members of the cast and production staff it means an extra five hours of daily practice and work. In Act IV we again pick up the trail of Mr. Senior, taken the morning after the play. Note the exceptionally silly grin on that puss. The play is over and our victim is free to recuperate.

Shot V was taken slightly later, on the day after the Senior Dance. Oh, boy! was that dance fun and . . . Oooo! My poor feet! Well, that's that.

On with the term. 'Tis the night of the Senior banquet and all through the school the "Surveyor" is out. What a riot! However there's more to this than meets the eye. Episode VI shows us the day after the banquet when our erratic Mr. Senior, who never learns, is again sick. He is shown soaking his poor hand (after signing about 800 senior annuals) and suffering from a stomach ache as well.

Another two weeks pass. Horror of horrors, what have we here. Regents!! Bloody Regents!! Oh! Oh! Shame on you Mr. Senior. (Let's peek at Number VII). Well, I can't say we blame you.

Anyhow, all bad things must come to an end, and in Candid VIII thoroughly gone, Mr. Senior slumps back for a sleep of ten weeks. With only the W. P. A. to turn to, however, the poor fellow will probably be back again next year as a P. G.

of SE HOR

A young man has just entered the library at Washington and asked for a copy of "Who's Who in America." He is interested in "who's who" and "what's what" among the officers of the school. We recognize this fellow as John Q. Senior and go over to tell him that he is using the wrong book, but we can give him the required information.

In the past our student officers have been elected each term by the student body as a whole. Beginning in September, however, only one set of officers will be elected each year. The candidates for office are junior and senior classmen who have been nominated by their home rooms and by the council of presidents, vice-presidents and secretary-treasurers respectively. From the two nominess the school makes their choice. This year's S. C. officers, in co-operation with the Executive council, have done their utmost to make our school a better, more efficient, and more pleasant place in which to live.

LOOKING UP

S. C. Officers. Left to right: Marvin Rubenstein, President; Joseph Cammaratta, Vice-President; Jerome Korpeck, Secretary-Treasurer.

The Senior Standard Bearer and Guardian of the Flag are chosen at the end of their eleventh year for outstanding character traits, participation, and scholastic ability. It is their job to take charge of the school flags at all regular assemblies and on special occasions and always to care for and protect them.

After this description, Mr. Senior looked well pleased, so we pause to show him and you several photographs of our S. C. officers and various class officers.

OUR LEADERS

When we had finished describing our S. C. officers, Mr. Senior seemed curious about the achievements of the leaders of the various grade levels. He knew all about the seniors, but what about the seniors of the future?

It did not take us very long to answer that their accomplishments vary, directly as the number of years they have been at Washington. For example, the eight graders are just becoming acquainted, and though they have their own home room officers, they are not yet organized as a class.

Though the freshmen of the ninth grade have only been organized for a year, their advisers, Miss Catherine Sheehan and Mr. Howard Edwards, tell us that the class has elected its officers and has had its first affair, a social get together and dance.

The members of the tenth year sophomore class are a bit more advanced. Their treasury boasts of a nice start from the proceeds of the two dances they have had to date. Mrs. Dorothy Redding and Mr. Raymond Baland, their advisers, and their officers all have amortious plans for the future.

Three years of organization and planning have prepared the elevanth year junior class for taking over the job of the seniors next september. In addition to their affairs of previous years, the group has held a successful junior prom this term and performed efficiently the man sized task of handling the Courtesy Party. The class, which is advised by Miss Katherine Kerrigan and Mr. James Ryan have four most capable officers.

With up and coming classes like these, Mr. Senior seemed satisfied that the future at Washington is secure.

ACTIVITIES

THOUGH MR. SENIOR IS NOT YET ABLE TO JOIN KIWANIS OR ROTARY, HE HAS BEEN A BUSY LITTLE FELLOW. THE WHIRL OF WASHINGTON'S ACTIVITIES HAS QUITE CAPTURED HIM. NOW, THEY CAPTURE OUR FANCIES AND WE LOOK THEM OVER.

Mr. Senior took advantage of the fact that visitors are always welcome to Executive Council meetings. His visits showed him that this school lawmaking body was active this year in sponsoring several drives and dances and in acquiring uniforms for the band, deputies, and safety officers.

Tea for Two!

Although unable to belong to the Girls' Service League Council, Mr. Senior admires the work of its members. The purpose of the League is to "help every girl develop fine traits of character, to know social usage, to support school activities, and to uphold the standards of the school." Members of the Council are chosen for leadership and willingness to serve.

School socials, teas, banquets, special assemblies, campaigns, lectures, and forums are typical activities. Mr. Senior was generously given an opportunity to be present at some of these.

ROLL THE PRESSES

Sometime in his hectic career, Mr. Senior took time to read the three publications of the school. "Washington Post," our school paper, kept him posted on student activities. The annual literary magazine, "The Pathfinder," contains creative work; such as poems, essays, and stories. As a senior, John Q. was not only interested in, but involved in the yearbook, the "Surveyor," which gives a complete survey of school activities, curricular and extra-curricular.

Clarence, from the play of the same name, was a World War hero who never got out of Texas. Mr. Senior, relaxed comfortably in his reserved seat, enjoyed a smooth performance made possible by the cooperation of committee members, cast, and director.

[&]quot;Clarence, Oh Clarence!"

"Central! Be gentle!"

In the presentation, "What a Life," Mr. Senior was relieved to find another high school boy who seemed to get into difficulties similar to his own. The efforts of the cast and production staff were well rewarded with a capacity attendance.

Honorary Dischargers

During the many study hall periods which Mr. Senior pleasantly spent in the library, he grew to appreciate the service so willingly offered by our library assistants. He found that these students are not only helpful in charging and discharging books and assisting him in locating those he needs, but they also keep our library neat and comfortable by arranging books and equipment.

The various book jacket exhibits on our library bulletin boards and the regular book exhibits held in the library are also the work of the library assistants.

Service Coming Up

Though the Lunchroom Assistants could not do much for Mr. Senior's indigestion, they have done many other things to make him comfortable in the lunchroom. He now takes this opportunity to express his appreciation of the services they have so consistently rendered.

Our Lunchroom Assistants are responsible for seeing that the cafeteria rules are observed and that good order is maintained. The efficiency of the cafeteria management is their concern, and the maintaining of a spirit of friendliness and cheerfulness in the dining room is their desire. In this they are always most successful.

Take A Message

Several times during his stay at Washington, Mr. Senior has been needed either in the office or by some member of the faculty. Always it was a messenger who delivered the notice to him as quickly as possible.

Messenger service at Washington is a voluntary organization open to all students in or above their sophomore year. Those chosen must maintain a scholastic average of C or better in each subject. Through their prompt and ready delivery of all messages they serve not only the office staff but the school community as a whole.

No Crowding

At every important corner in the school a member of the Deputy Council can be found during passing periods. These deputies render a valuable service to the school by keeping order in the corridors. The Corridor Aids, a branch of the deputies, help maintain quiet throughout the building during lunch period.

Mr. Senior stopped to talk with one of these boys, who was dressed in his new blue and gold coat. He found that in order to become a deputy, a boy must be in the tenth grade or above and maintain a satisfactory report card average. A reliable group of boys always turns out for the job.

Stand Back!

If a boy stops you on the school street corners until it is safe to cross, he is a safety officer. If you see a student supervising the bicycle room, you should know that he too is a safety officer, and the boy who brings out the return flag during fire drill is also a member of this class.

Mr. Senior has been served by members of the Safety Council in all these capacities, and he knows from experience that each and every member of this group does his work well. This year, for the first time, all safety officers have been properly uniformed in dark blue jackets with yellow trimmings.

MARSHALS

Lead The Way

Mr. Senior has twice been rendered service by the Marshals' Council. Once, when he had lost his suit case somewhere in the building, it had been returned safe and sound by a marshall at the lost and found desk. On another occasion Mr. Senior's parents had visited the school, and it was a marshall who guided them about the building.

In this dual role, these honor students chosen from the eleventh and twelfth grades, known as marshalls, will always be found. Once each year they also hold a sale of unclaimed articles which brings in a nice sum for the school fund.

Democracy Steps Forward!

Among the more newly organized groups at Washington, Mr. Senior looks with expectations at the Social Problems Forum. This group, which consists of a selective list of Juniors and Seniors, has as its purpose the study of the problems facing a democratic society today. The Forum, this year, is devoting time to the study of the conditions of housing, socialized medicine, and the problems of youth. Among the projects suggested, is a conference with a student delegation from Toronto for the purpose of comparing study methods and exchanging views on key problems of the day.

Service with a Smile

Mr. Senior found his way to the print shop where he saw members of the Graphic Arts Society preparing the monthly calendar of school events. It was a good time to thank them for this and other invaluable services rendered during the school year.

Pro and Con!

When Mr. Senior slipped into a meeting of the Public Speaking Club, he found that the organization had a triple purpose: to have its members better speakers; to be able to participate in group discussions; and to form a more critical and appreciative audience. A splendid goal!

Sing a Song . . .

Any student in the ninth grade or above who is unusually talented or has had previous vocal training may elect Advanced Choir. From this group are chosen eighty singers to represent Washington High outside of the school. John Q. appreciated their assembly programs so much that he went to the Spring Music Festival at the Eastman Theatre to applaud for Washington's vocalists. He discovered that many members of the Choir are in one or more of the three Inter-High choral organizations. This is another indication of the musical ability of Washington High School students.

Mr. J. Q. Senior became acquainted with the organization when he attended the operetta, "Rose of the Danube," by Morgan and Penn; for the chorus was mainly composed of the Washington Singers. The Singers also form the small, mobile group representing the Senior Choir on WHAM and WHEC broadcasts as well as in other outside engagements.

Pushing his way through the crowds at the Memorial Day parade, Mr. Senior was proud to see the Washington High Band marching down the street in perfect step and tune. This is the first year that the band has done much marching, but at both the basketball games and at the parade, this feature was enthusiastically received.

Keeping up with its advance in formation work, the group has shown great improvement in its playing, which has been successfully demonstrated in assemblies and in a spring concert during "Know Your School Week."

Music Hath Charms . . .

On Open House night of "Know Your School Week" Mr. Senior entered the Auditorium and seated himself amid parents and friends. There he was given a musical treat by the Washington Orchestra and Band. This has been only one of the programs which the orchestra has played during this year. The music for assembly programs and school plays and presentations has been ably done by this group.

Their steady work and that of their director, Mr. Scammell, has brought splendid effects in their playing. Their only handicap is lack of sufficient members. All students interested in playing and learning how to play in the orchestra are welcome.

Membership in the Canary Club is open to any student in the Voice classes. The Club sponsors all recitals given in the school for teachers, students, and special guests. Mr. Senior was pleased to receive an invitation to one of the recitals which he thoroughly enjoyed. He was surprised to learn that for some, it was only their first public appearance. The members explained that at these recitals, they had an opportunity to gain experience in singing before an audience. Thereafter, John Q. noticed the poise with which they sang in our assembly programs.

During the school year 1939-40, the Girls' Chorus presented a delightful program for our assembly and participated in several Canary Club recitals. They also appeared in a program at the Masonic Temple and over station WHAM.

Give A Yell!

Blending his mighty voice with that of the Varsity Club of Washington, Mr. Senior together with the group not only gave some good cheers but helped inspire our teams on to sweet victory. Through the constant support and enthusiasm of the Varsity Club, the Washington Generals have been spurred on to many successes.

The club is a voluntary organization and all members provide their own uniforms. Through the effort of their director, Mr. Thayer, this organization is becoming more important every day to the school community as well as to the teams.

Batter Up!

As baseball enters its second century of play, there continues to be an increasing interest in America's already favorite sport. Among the more ardent fans at the games of our baseball team, we always find John Q. Senior.

In an interview with this most interesting person, Mr. Senior stated, "Unfortunately, our team is not on top this year, but we can proudly say that this season is marked by hard fighting and close competition. Praise is also due to Coach Kiggins who is doing some fine work with the boys."

Shoot It Up!

Though the 1939-40 edition of the Washington Generals was not overly successful in league play, it did win a total of nine games of the sixteen played during the season. The team, as a whole, while not up to expectancy, did play good ball, losing out in many cases by the barest of margins.

Mr. Senior notes with extreme gratification the honor bestowed on one of its players. Bob DePuyt was placed on both the all-scholastic teams chosen in the city. Another of the more pleasing sidelights of the season was the increasing dominance displayed by the Generals over their arch rivals, the Quakers of Franklin.

Kick That Goal!

Though football stole the spotlight from the game of soccer this year, the Washington soccer team was still out there fighting. There was less glory but just as much fun in the game.

The 1939 Washington soccer team was known in soccer circles as the "hard luck" team. They lost most of the seasons's games, which Mr. Senior watched, but in the majority of these the players were only defeated by one point. Typical of the luck the team had was the last minute goal by which they lost to the league-leading Marshall, the nearest any rival came to them. Nevertheless the Generals were always game and fighting.

BOYS' SPORTS

In addition to the better known interscholastic baseball, basketball, and soccer, upon which we focus most of our attention, John Ω . Senior has been able to enjoy many other sports at Washington.

Both major sports and first on our list are the Track and Field and the Cross Country teams. A poor showing by the cross country team this year was due more to a small turnout of boys for the team than to lack of trying. Coach Kiggins deserves praise for the fact that several members of the team sprang a few "surprises" at meets and Phil Strem took a first place in the sectionals. Coach Morse's track team has not as yet completed its season but hopes to place rather well.

Though overshadowed by the first teams, the reserve baseball, basketball, and soccer teams have all had a rather decent season. We watch these boys with a keen interest, for it is the reserve teams of today who are tomorrow's regulars. Judging from this, our teams for the next two years should be tops.

MAJOR AND MINOR

A further glance at Washington's world of sports brings the swimming team to the front. Swimming is a major interscholastic sport which receives little notice but in which the school has turned out some top notch performers. This year, Coach Kiggins gave us some very satisfactory results. Mr. Senior looks with pride at the record set by Washington's swimmers at the sectionals at the U. of R. where several of the Generals placed.

Among the minor sports are both interscholastic intra-school contests. Though groups in golf, boxing, fencing, and wrest'ing have not made the interscholastic arena, they are nevertheless important in that they left co-ordination and body building and develop good sportsmanship.

While our bowling team shamefacedly lost a match to a far weaker faculty team, their interscholastic record is much better. Throughout the year they have been consistently near the top. Mr. Senior regrets that his memoirs had to go to press before the tennis and horseshoe pitching season got under way, but, judging from past records, he is sure of results of which he can be proud.

BADMINTON

Anyone interested in badminton, including Mr. Senior, knows that both ability and keen judgment are required. The girls and boys who have been turning out regularly have worked toward attaining perfection in this particular sport.

BASKETBALL

The girls' basketball club consists of eleventh and twelfth grade girls who have been coming out faithfully since their entrance into school. Mr. Senior finds that through the able coaching of their leader, Miss Tarbox, they are capable of playing a good game against stiff competition.

Possessing keen eyes and capable of producing sharp stings, Miss Tarbox's Archery Club is one of the most skilled organizations in Washington High. Mr. Senior has watched them practice the art of removing the bull's eye from a target and knows they're really successful.

BOWLING

A recent addition to the Sports Clubs is the Bowling Club, Mr. Senior tells us. Under the fine supervision of Miss Gaffney, the girls have shown their skill and each one can bowl a high game.

LIFE SAVING

The girls who belong to the Life Saving Club are those who have passed either their junior or senior life-saving tests. Mr. Senior finds that these swimmers are striving to reach the goal of a Senior Life Saver.

TENNIS

With rackets and balls in hand the Tennis Club is ready to show Mr. Senior the game. Its members consist of girls interested in learning the new strokes and pointers about both singles and doubles. Miss Gaffney is the instructor.

PING PONG

A new comer is the Ping Pong Club whose popularity is shown in the large numbers turning out. Mr. Senior proudly reports that one of its members, Anne Umansky, recently captured first place in the Monroe County Women's Ping Pong Tournament.

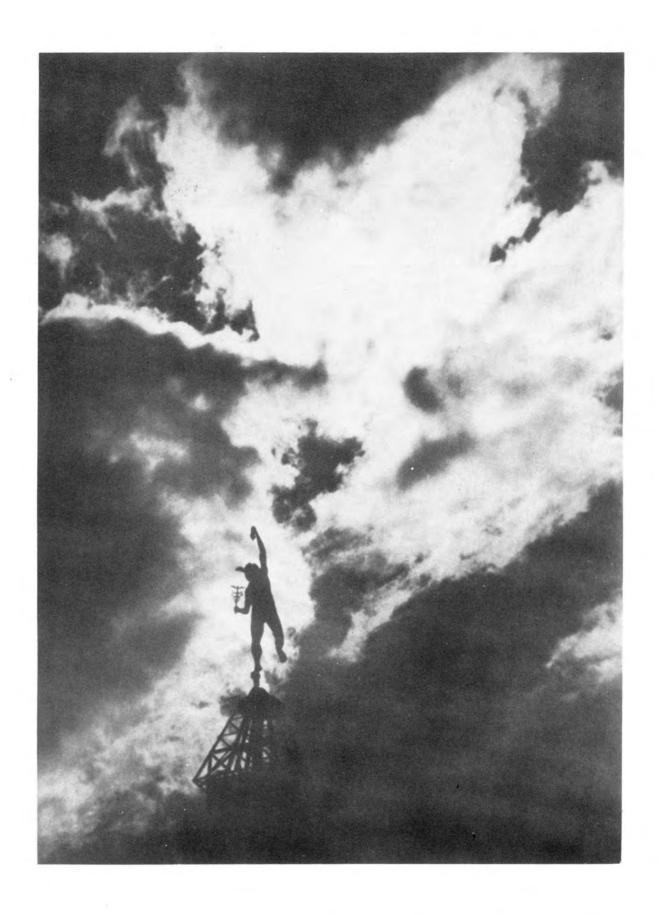

SOCIAL DANCING

The Social Dancing Committee has done much in bringing about a general feeling of well being in dances held in our school. They see that the dances are run off smoothly, encourage correct dancing habits, and teach those interested, including Mr. Senior, the latest dance steps.
