SYNOPSIS

On Christmas Eve, Santa Claus' daughter is clearing up the living room after her busy father has finished the last of his toys. He comes into the room looking for his gloves, and while he is talking to his daughter a queer noise is heard outside the door. His daughter reminds him that on Christmas Eve the toys are allowed to come to life for an hour, and the French Doll is the first to "wake up." One by one other toys follow, the Weathervane Man demands his hour off too, the Moonbeams come to join the fun, and even the customary decorations and accessories of a Christmas feast come to life. While the fun is at its height the clock strikes again, and the toys gradually lose their powers of speech and motion and are ready to be placed in Santa's sleigh.

The Operetta will be followed by a medley of Christmas carols .
Audience please remain seated.
